The Medora Outlooks are a project inspired by and designed for the landscape of the badlands. The project consists of three separate built pavilions or outlooks, within the Medora badlands. Each themed to a distinct element of the landscape that make these badlands special, the rocky buttes, the winding Little Missouri river, and the waving grasses. The outlooks also serve as a resting and destination point for hikers and bikers alike, while also providing small educational experiences to further understanding the landscape.

A small map of the river in the floor points out key locations down stream.

The River Outlook takes form inspiration from the "S" shape bends of the Little Missouri river.

The form mimics the diversity of the land's greenery and provides a connection to the ground and what grows out of it.

The interior houses planters displaying native plants of the area to educate visitors.

Large Windows Facing The Valley Isolate The Views Of Nearby Buttes.
The Back Country Campground offers 3 acres of tenting space along a valley to provide a unique, isolated experience.

After hitting the trails, one can find a spot to camp amongst the 4 acres of ground around the butte.
